VELOCITY CAPITAL GROUP, LLC, Plaintiff,

v.

VYVUE, LLC and BENNETT E.
HORTMAN, II,

Defendants.

MEMORANDUM DECISION AND ORDER DENYING [6] MOTION FOR RELIEF FROM ORDER

Case No. 2:23-cv-00356-DBB

District Judge David Barlow

Before the court is Defendants Vyvue, LLC and Bennett E. Hortman, II’s (collectively “Defendants”) Motion for Relief from Order.<sup>1</sup> Defendants seek relief from the court’s remand order pursuant to Rules 59(e) and Rule 60(b) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. Having considered the briefing and relevant law, the court decides the matter without a hearing.<sup>2</sup> For the following reasons, the court denies the motion.

BACKGROUND

Plaintiff Velocity Capital Group, LLC (“Velocity”) is a limited liability company authorized to do business in the state of New York.<sup>3</sup> Defendants reside in Utah.<sup>4</sup> On April 3, 2023, Velocity filed its Complaint in the Supreme Court of New York in Ontario County, asserting state-law claims for breach of contract and guaranty.<sup>5</sup> Defendants removed to the District of Utah on May 31, 2023.<sup>6</sup> The court found removal improper under 28 U.S.C. § 1441 because Defendants purported to remove a case filed in New York state court to Utah federal court.<sup>7</sup> The court remanded the action sua sponte.<sup>8</sup> On June 20, 2023, Defendants filed their Motion for Relief from Order.<sup>9</sup>

STANDARD

Rule 59(e) allows a court to alter or amend its prior judgment.<sup>10</sup> “Such relief may be warranted because of ‘an intervening change in the controlling law’ or ‘the need to correct clear error or prevent manifest injustice.’”<sup>11</sup> “It is not appropriate to revisit issues already addressed or advance arguments that could have been raised in prior briefing.”<sup>12</sup> The court’s ruling will not be disturbed “unless it was arbitrary, capricious, whimsical, or manifestly unreasonable.”<sup>13</sup> Under Rule 60(b), the court may relieve a party from an order for several reasons, including “mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect” or “any other reason that justifies relief.”<sup>14</sup> “Because [the Rule] is ‘a grand reservoir of equitable power to do justice in a particular case,’ a court may grant relief ‘only in extraordinary circumstances and only when necessary to accomplish justice.’”<sup>15</sup> Simply rehashing previous arguments is not enough to merit such relief.<sup>16</sup>

DISCUSSION

Before addressing Defendants' arguments under Rule 59(e) and Rule 60(b), the court must first determine if it has jurisdiction. Under 28 U.S.C. § 1447(d), “[a]n order remanding a case to the State court from which it was removed is not reviewable on appeal or otherwise.”<sup>17</sup> The Supreme Court has interpreted this provision “to ‘preclude review . . . of remands for lack of subject-matter jurisdiction and for defects in removal procedure.’”<sup>18</sup> This language has been ‘universally construed’ by federal courts of appeal to bar district courts from revisiting their orders of remand.<sup>19</sup> While the Tenth Circuit has not spoken directly on this issue, at least three lower courts have found they cannot review their own remand orders.<sup>20</sup> As various courts have noted, “[t]he district court has one shot, right or wrong. . . . This is not only in the interest of judicial economy, but out of respect for the state court and in recognition of principles of comity.”<sup>21</sup> As such, “[o]nce a district court certifies a remand order to [the] state court it is divested of jurisdiction and can take no further action on the case.”<sup>22</sup> The weight of persuasive authority therefore suggests that this court may not have jurisdiction.

Even if the court did have jurisdiction to reconsider the remand order, Defendants fail to meet the necessary standards under Rule 59(e) or Rule 60(b). They offer no compelling or extraordinary reasons for relief. Defendants simply want this court to accept jurisdiction despite clear statutory language to the contrary. Indeed, their motion for relief is devoid of any mention of 28 U.S.C. § 1441. This statute proclaims that “any civil action brought in a State court . . . , may be removed by the . . . defendants, to the district court of the United States for the district and division embracing the place where such action is pending.”<sup>23</sup> Because Velocity filed in Kings County, New York, removal was possible only to the Eastern District of New York. Defendants’ arguments that jurisdiction and venue could be proper here are of no moment.<sup>24</sup>

If Defendants want the case litigated in Utah, they must follow the law. As one court recently explained, Defendants may seek to “remove the case to the appropriate United States District Court in New York and then file a motion to transfer venue in that district asking to transfer the case to this district.”<sup>25</sup> But “Defendants cannot create their own shortcuts that are contrary to governing law.”<sup>26</sup> For these reasons, the court cannot grant Defendants relief.

ORDER

Accordingly, the court DENIES Defendants’ Motion for Relief from Order.<sup>27</sup>
